Education and Training Sector Guide – Considering a career in this sector?

The education & training sector can be divided into a variety of areas. Some common areas include:

• School Education
• Further Education (FE) or Higher Education (HE)
• Coaches
• Instructing
• Training Officers
• School Business Management

Education also takes place in non-school or Academic settings, such as hospitals and prisons. Teaching is the main area of work. There are also teaching-related roles such as teaching assistants in schools and educational psychologists, as well as positions in areas such as policy making, administration and technical support.

The primary and secondary education systems in England, Wales and Northern Ireland are similar in their administration. Scotland has a completely separate system, with its own rules and practices. There is a fairly constant demand for teachers, although there may be shortages in certain subject areas, such as science and mathematics, and the availability of posts varies between the regions/nations of the UK. There is currently more competition for positions in primary schools than in secondary education.

Outside of the education sector there are posts within sports coaching, vocational instructors, training officers within commercial organisations, health education and driving, to name but a few.

What type of roles and locations will I typically find in this industry?

Roles in education aren't specifically just teaching. They can also include:

• Teacher
• Lecturer
• Instructor
• Finance Officer
• HR
• Sports Coaching
• Welfare Support

Locations:

➢ FE and HE Institutions such as College or University
➢ Primary and Secondary Schools; State-run and Private ➢ Prisons and Detention Centres
➢ Hospitals
➢ Professional Bodies and Training Organisations
➢ Corporate and Commercial Organisations

Why work in Education and Training?

The Education and Training Sector is wide-ranging in terms of employment roles and locations. Jobs in this sector are often demanding but also fulfilling. Employment opportunities in the education sector vary from teaching and training to finance and human resources. These jobs are mainly concerned with ensuring the integrity of academic institutions and maintaining the wellbeing of the education sector.

Advantages:

Exposure to Multiple Perspectives: Jobs in education or Training tend to expose employees to a wide variety of perspectives and many different opinions.

Stable Schedule: Employees in this sector can usually rely on a reliable work schedule with stable hours and little overtime.

Personal Fulfilment: Have a chance to instil knowledge in different groups of the population.

Interpersonal Interactions: You can develop close relationships with colleagues, students, and academic community and make a real difference.

Worldwide Opportunities

Depending on your employment preference, the education and training sector can be international in nature and some roles can offer excellent opportunities for working in other countries. If you want to work abroad, there are openings worldwide for English language teachers (ELT/TEFL), teaching in English-speaking countries and institutions and volunteering, or you could be delivering training for a multi-national organisation.

And finally...

If you enjoy a constantly evolving profession, the education and training sector offers a unique opportunity to influence people and develop your professional skills.

The average salary in the UK’s education sector is £31,705. Starting salaries for teachers in Inner London average £27,819 and £25,880 in Outer London.
Skills and Qualifications

State Schools - To teach in a state school in England and Wales or to gain a place on a postgraduate teacher training course, you must have a degree and there are additional specific educational requirements. (Requirements for Scotland and Northern Ireland are similar.) Essential Skills include:

- Experience of working with children,
- Good communication skills,
- Planning and Organisational skills,
- Professionalism.
- Enthusiasm for learners and for your subject.

Full details of entry requirements are available from:
http://www.prospects.ac.uk/teaching_education_sector.htm

Further Education - A degree is not essential but you must have relevant experience and for most disciplines have a relevant qualification. You must also be able to produce evidence of teaching skills. The Level 3 Award in Education & Training, formerly known as Preparing to Teach in the Lifelong Learning Sector (PTTLS) is seen as the basic teaching qualification required by most FE providers. This is available through CTP at our Aldershot Training Centre.

Higher Education - For HE lecturing, a postgraduate degree is usually essential and a PhD is increasingly required, together with relevant experience for vocational/professional courses.

Non-Teaching Posts/Professional Services within Educational Institutions - Requirements for non-teaching/lecturing posts vary widely but are broadly in line with those for similar jobs in other sectors. It may be useful to have experience of working with students or children, as appropriate to the post, as well as experience in your specific field of work.

Get into Teaching and Taster Events

The Department for Education Website advertise a range of open events and teacher recruitment fairs across the UK. Visit www.getintoteaching.education.gov.uk. They also run a number of on line events.

Did You Know?!..

You can get into early years, primary, and secondary school teaching with any degree, and if you want to teach an in-demand subject you may be eligible for a bursary.
Courses to Consider

Foundation Certificate in Learning and Development Practice (CIPD)

Speak to your Career Consultant or check out the CTP Website for more info.

This course is highly intensive and those wishing to attend should be numerate and literate to at least Level 2. Evening work will be required to complete assignments and study, and attendees should therefore be prepared to put in the required effort to achieve their desired result. This course is open to all Service leavers, however those with experience in the delivery or design and implementation of training will have an advantage during the course.

Level 3 Award in Education and Training

Speak to your Career Consultant or check out the CTP Website for more info.

Achieving the Level 3 Award in Education and Training will provide sufficient evidence that the learner has obtained the necessary skills and knowledge to prepare, plan, deliver and evaluate basic teaching and learning sessions in a variety of teaching or training contexts. The course is open to all Service personnel. It is particularly suitable for those planning a second career in adult FE education or commercial training.

Further Forces launches online pin maps to match teaching vacancies to candidates
New online pin maps have been created to help Further Education providers fill hard-to-recruit-to technical teaching vacancies with Armed Services leavers from the ETF’s Further Forces programme. The maps help providers identify suitable candidates to fill vacancies and candidates to identify vacancies they may be interested in. The first map, which is aimed at provider. More Info

Would a specific EdTech Teacher Status benefit those teaching in FE?
The Education and Training Foundation (ETF) is carrying out an exercise exploring the feasibility of an EdTech Teacher Status for the Further Education (FE) and Training sector’s workforce. Similar to QTLS and ATS, the EdTech Teacher Status would be the badge of EdTech advanced practitioner professionalism and mastery in FE. The EdTech Teacher Status
More Info
The Education and Training Foundation (ETF) in partnership with the Gatsby Charitable Foundation has launched the Further Forces Programme, a scheme to retrain Armed Forces Service leavers to teach technical subjects, including science, engineering and technology, in the Further Education and Training sector. The University of Portsmouth and the University of Brighton have been awarded the national contracts to train (Portsmouth) and mentor (Brighton) Armed Forces Service leavers to work as Further Education (FE) teachers and trainers based in colleges and training providers across England.

ABOUT THE PROGRAMME
The project will be rolled out through two national hubs – one in the North of England and one in the South. The programme will run for two years and aims to recruit and train 110 new teachers in the sector. While recruitment activity has now started, the delivery of training and employment opportunities will start from September this year.

The University of Portsmouth will recruit Service leavers and link them with suitable employment. The newly employed Service leavers will then undergo an in-service training programme. Alongside this, the University of Brighton will provide mentoring support to ensure the new teachers are successful in their role.

WHO CAN APPLY?
Any service personnel who are planning to leave the Armed Forces, or who have left in the past 2 years. You should have an interest in becoming a teacher in the FE sector i.e. teaching students aged 16 and over.

DO I NEED ANY PRIOR EXPERIENCE OR QUALIFICATIONS?
No. We are looking for people with technical knowledge and a desire to train/teach. All training to become an effective trainer/teacher will be provided by the programme. All you are expected to have already are:

- GCSE Mathematics and English language at grade C or above, or equivalent.
- A subject specialism or skill for which you would teach or deliver training
- Willingness to undergo a DBS (criminal record) check

HOW MUCH WILL THIS COST?
There is no cost for service personnel undertaking this programme. The total cost of training, including mentor support, will be provided by the Education & Training Foundation and the Gatsby Charitable Foundation.

How to apply
For more information and to apply for this programme, visit the University of Portsmouth’s website
